

Denmark has bet its energy future on wind – and the government is working toward a year 2020 goal to produce 50% of its power from this sustainable source. With 28% of its power supply now coming from wind, the Danes are halfway there.